Part II Course Details

1. Abstract

The course is a blend of theory and practice in nature. The module also emphasises evaluation and analysis of the English language communication process. The course involves the team based practical production of a communication product, such as a training video, staff handbook, public campaign, market research report, database, website, seminar, newsletter or brochure for example, in collaboration with a host organisation provides a direct stimulus for critical thinking, evaluation and reflection of the entire communications process in the professional context.

This course provides a practical basis for critical thinking and its innovative application in practice allowing students to demonstrate their intellectual abilities and practical professional communication skills at a level appropriate for the Honours degree.

The course aims to:

- apply professional communication concepts and techniques involved in the complex process of managing projects and creating documents in the workplace across a range of texts and for various audiences.
- manage and critically evaluate the impact that communication messages have on stakeholders across a range of social and professional contexts
- understand and apply the communicative devices used by professional communicators
- practice writing and presenting professional communication messages across genres and in real workplace settings
